This form needs to be completed by participants who are ready to start work on the Individuated Concentration portion of their Master's degree. Approval must be obtained from your faculty advisor prior to taking any of the courses.

A. The Individuated Concentration is a major component of the master's degree program. It is organized around a theme of interest that you will define and then pursue through specific courses and individual reading and research projects. Please identify the focus of your Individuated Concentration by describing 1) the theme you would like to emphasize and 2) why it is important to you. Your learning goals rather than course availability should determine your concentration theme.

B. The attached list of relevant courses should facilitate the process of course selection for your Individuated Concentration. In addition, use any other information on courses you might be able to obtain. List all courses, relevant directed reading or research arrangements that you think are appropriate to your theme and which are of particular interest to you. Please note that while in most cases it will be preferable to enroll in graduate level courses, it is possible to take upper division undergraduate work (i.e. 300-400 numbered courses). Please indicate the semester and year if the course(s) was/were taken before entering the Program. Your faculty advisor must approve courses listed here.

Should it become necessary for you to change the focus of your concentration, you will need to obtain your faculty advisor's approval for the change and for the new course selection(s).
